

Coaching for Literacy Leaders

Marzano Research can support the development of your district leaders through coaching and consultation. We offer direct, professional learning to leaders, which applies a leadership lens to literacy and multi-tiered system of supports (MTSS) research and considerations for practice. The professional learning is designed specifically for those leading district and school-level initiatives but is relevant to any administrator charged with leading systemwide literacy and MTSS efforts. The coaching will focus on building the expertise of each leader in their respective area of responsibility while also supporting leaders to empower others. The literacy priorities of the district and leaders will drive the coaching session topics.

What to Expect from Leadership Coaching

During the coaching sessions, Marzano Research will help organize the literacy work within the district's context to create and implement the systems and conditions needed to take on challenging initiatives and improve student outcomes in literacy. Marzano Research can provide coaching services in a variety of formats that best meet the needs of the district, school, and individual. All coaching services are offered virtually and may include one-on-one or team coaching in the following areas:

Creating your literacy team and establishing the norms, processes, and procedures for the success of that team.

Creating or refining your district literacy framework.

Developing data cycles and protocols to implement with your literacy team.

Building capacity in facilitation skills, consensus building, conflict resolution, and problem-solving.

Creating or refining your district literacy mission and vision.

Developing communication and dissemination plans.

What you'll take away:

- Final memo summarizing lessons learned and key takeaways from coaching sessions.
- Suite of resources (including handouts, implementation plans, and protocols) generated during the coaching sessions.
